Clinical Experience

- Jemma is an experienced physiotherapist. She has worked in several senior neurological physiotherapy roles in a variety of NHS clinical settings. She has worked across the treatment pathway from hyperacute units through to community rehabilitation.
- In these roles, Jemma was involved in assessment of brain and spinal cord injuries at the acute stage in order to plan and provide appropriate treatment and rehabilitation plans.
- Jemma's previous experience includes working in a private neurological rehab residential setting as a clinical lead physiotherapist.
- She has vast experience of managing a wide range of rehabilitation pathways to progress her severely injured patients.
- Jemma also has extensive experience of managing treatment for complex orthopaedic injuries.

Rehabilitation Expertise

Rehabilitation Management

- As a Rehabilitation Case Manager, Jemma can combine her clinical expertise with her knowledge of the rehabilitation process. She has successfully managed adults with complex conditions including severe brain injury, spinal cord injury as well as complex orthopaedic injuries including amputees.

- Jemma uses her clinical knowledge and experience of injury and rehabilitation to ensure that her clients have the best possible rehabilitation treatment in place in order to obtain and sustain an optimum and timely recovery.

Vocational Rehabilitation

- She is passionate about supporting her clients to return to work and meaningful activities.
- Jemma applies a biopsychosocial approach, taking into consideration the biology and physiology of the underlying injury, in addition to addressing psychological and social contextual factors. This approach promotes independence and is supportive of a return to work.
- She has experience of multi-disciplinary team working which enables her to work closely with Vocational Rehabilitation Specialists to support a safe and sustainable return to work, where appropriate.
